Expedite Receives GTC East Best Solutions Award for 2006

Winning solution is distance learning network for a New York BOCES

Westbury, N.Y. – Expedite Video Conferencing Services, Inc. (Expedite), a leader in building worldwide voice and video networks, has announced that it has received the GTC East Best Solutions Award for 2006 for a "successful solution created by a public/private collaboration." The award will be presented at the Sept 26th Government Technology Conference and Expo in Albany New York. Expedite's winning entry was a distance learning network for a large BOCES in New York. The network delivers point-to-point and multipoint video-based and Web-based education, training, and collaboration to 300 schools, 195,000 students, and more than 650,000 adults.

The BOCES organization engaged Expedite to work with them to design, develop, implement, and deliver training and management for an IP-based video conferencing educational network. Expedite worked very closely with their teachers, students, community members, and government officials to understand all of their needs. This cooperation was necessary to insure that the solution was cost effective, flexible, scalable, and delivered the best possible voice and video quality.

"We're very happy and proud to have received this prestigious award," said Joe Campolo, President of Expedite. "We do a lot of business with government agencies in New York and we are especially pleased with the outcome of the New York BOCES project. The distance learning network that we implemented for them allows all of its participants to share in a broad array of educational courses, field trips, and collaborative projects, without incurring the expense of transportation, meeting facilities, and admission fees."
